David L. Tsin combines his skills as a seasoned attorney and M.B.A. graduate, his background as a Certified Public Accountant*, and his professional experience, including prior "Big Law" and "Big Four" experience, to address a wide range of corporate, securities, and other business law matters. David's business acumen, versatility, judgment, attention to detail, zealous advocacy for clients, interpersonal skills, and problem-solving abilities have been valuable in myriad matters.

David has considerable experience advising and representing clients in connection with acquisitions, dispositions, mergers, joint ventures, private equity investments, financing arrangements, employment agreements, securities offerings, other commercial contracts and transactions, compliance with securities laws and regulations, and legal entity formation and governance. He helps clients in various industries achieve their goals in an efficient and legally sound manner.

Prior to joining Brach Eichler, David practiced law at the New York City office of two prominent, international law firms, where he focused on sophisticated corporate and securities law transactions. Prior to law school, David worked in the public accounting profession as a Manager at the New York City office of a "Big Four" accounting firm.
